Connective Tissue and Bodypschotherapy

Biological Foundations of Bodypschotherapy with early Traumatization – Clinical Observations and Theoretical Implications

With Will Davis, USA

Englischer Workshop mit deutscher Übersetzung

Functional Analysis is a modern approach of body psychotherapy, developed by the American Psychologist Will Davis. Working with the connective tissue system it plays a central role in stimulating the natural self-regulation of the organism. With the Points & Positions touch technique, Will Davis has developed a gentle, body-based method to non-invasively help people with early developmental trauma to improve their emotion regulation and ability to relate to themselves and their environment. In the workshop, Will Davis will present the main theory and concepts of his body psychotherapy work with connective tissue and illustrate them with a case study of a patient with schizoid personality disorder.

The following topics will be covered in the workshop:

- An elaboration and deepening of Wilhelm Reich's model of character and body armor on the basis of modern connective tissue research
- The importance of connective tissue work in Body Psychotherapy
- Use of connective tissue's structure and functions to stimulate self-relationship and biological-energetic collective movement
- Case studies on the psycho-physiological changes that can be achieved through connective tissue work

Will Davis (1943) is an American psychologist and body psychotherapist. He is the founder of „Functional Analysis,“ a modern approach to body psychotherapy. The examination of the biological basis of schizoid character structures and the development of body-based methods in psychotherapy with early disturbed people are important foci of his work. www.functionalanalysis.org
